‘Just Transition’, it is stipulated in preamble to the PARIS AGREEMENT, as a notion to be taken into consideration of global warming policies. To realize the Decarbonized Society, where emission of GHG is pushed down to almost Zero, up to the last half of 21st century, drastic social changes are necessary. On the other side, it is expected to cause social problems worldwide, including increase of unemployment and deterioration of labour conditions.

‘Just Transition’ is one of the ‘Responsible Measures’ that give comprehensive means to such problems. It also plays important role to materialize sustainable development, accompanied by continuous economic growth.

In this event, we will deepen our understanding on an importance to consider employment policy in counter measures to global warming, by sharing experts’ lectures/reports from closely related parties to the issue, including good practices in the past.
